

HOSPITALITY

Needed:

- 4 waters (or a pitcher and 4 cups with no ice) prior to performance.
- Parking (or load in) space reserved for a 15 passenger van (no trailer) within load in distance.
- A secure place to leave personal items (backpack etc) during performance. We will trust your staff if the best you have is an office or kitchen. Stage and instrument storage needs to be between 45 and 95 degrees or there will be instrument malfunction. Direct sun is out of the question.

Appreciated:

- Any type of food is fine. Healthy is good but we're not picky. Non-dairy option appreciated.
- Coconut water
- coffee
- bananas
- M&Ms (with all the red ones removed, of course)

PROMOTION MATERIAL

IMPORTANT: Primate Fiasco has drastically updated their lineup and instrumentation over the past 2 years. Most photos in a search will be inaccurate. Please ONLY use updated photos, video, and bio found at www.theprimatefiasco.com.

- Do not google the band as you will end up with incorrect photos, video, and bio.
- Material that you got from us last time we played there is still going to be wrong.
- If it came from Youtube, it's wrong.
- Info and pics from Jambase, Facebook, Reverb Nation, your wife's night stand - all wrong.
- If it's not taken directly from our website 10 seconds ago, it's probably wrong.
- If you're not familiar or are under the age of 30, "Websites" are a designated place on the internet where fans are not allowed to post obsolete material and said material is not ranked based on how many people have clicked on it in the past decade. These "websites" are managed directly by the band or band's management and obsolete material can be removed. Even though they are not Facebook, Google, or Youtube, they can still be accessed by a regular browser. No need for off road vehicles or spelunking gear. It's very simple, you just type theprimatefiasco.com into the top of your browser.. No! no! That's the google window. Not there. That's where you would type "what is a website" or "historic things from the ancient internet". Up higher, where it says something that starts with "http://". There ya go. Perfect. Thank you!
- The Primate Fiasco does not have a sense of humor about this that they are currently aware of. This is not a joke. Obsolete promo material featuring past members and instruments may result in fewer ticket sales and a urine odor on the green room.
- Blank posters can also be found at www.theprimatefiasco.com